

than is generally supposed, to favor the plans of the leaders of the Eoyalist party, to whom M. Nesselrode had declared that before he would pledge himself to further their views he must have proofs that they were seconded by the population of Paris.

I was afterwards informed by an eyewitness of what took place on the evening of the 31st of March in one of the principal meetings of the Royalists, which was held in the hotel of the Comte de Morf ontaine, who acted as president on the occasion. Amidst a chaos of abortive propositions and contradictory motions M. Sosthenes de la Rochefoucauld proposed that a deputation should be immediately sent to the Emperor Alexander to express to him the wish of the meeting. This motion was immediately approved, and the mover was chosen to head the deputation. On leaving the hotel the deputation met M. de Chateaubriand, who had that very day been, as it were, the precursor of the restoration, by publishing his admirable manifesto, entitled, "Bonaparte and the Bourbons." He was invited to join the deputation ; but nothing could overcome his diffidence and induce him to speak. On arriving at the h6tel in the Rue St. Florentin the deputation was introduced to Count Nesselrode, to whom M. Sosth&nes de la Rochefoucauld briefly explained its object; he spoke of the wishes of the meeting and of the manifest desire of Paris and of France. He represented the restoration of the Bourbons as the only means of securing the peace of Europe; and observed, in conclusion, that as the exertions of the day must have been very fatiguing to the Emperor, the deputation would not solicit the favor of being introduced to him, but would confidently rely on the good faith of his Imperial Majesty. "I have just left the Emperor[^]" replied M. Vessel-rode, "and can pledge myself for his intentions. Return to the meeting and announce to the French people that in compliance with their wishes his Imperial Majesty will use all his influence to restore the crown to the legitimate monarch : his Majesty Louis XVIII. shall re-ascend the throne of France." With this gratifying intelligence the deputation returned to the meeting in the Rue d'Anjou.
